Early Childhood Autism Program

The UNR Early Childhood Autism Program is dedicated to improving the lives of young children with autism and their families through intensive education and treatment according to the scientific principles and established practices of applied behavior analysis. The Program follows a scientist-practitioner model whereby the practice of applied behavior analysis is complemented and extended by research that contributes to the knowledge base of behavior science. Whether research, practice, or both, the focus is always on the child and family, emphasizing the progressive development, refinement, and elaboration of meaningful skills and abilities. With its connection to the University of Nevada, Reno, the Program is also a training site for students involved in the science and practice of behavior analysis.
